

Careers for Russian Majors/Diploma of Languages in Russian

There are many career fields which relate to studies in Russian. In choosing your career path, it is important to reflect on the skills you have learned through your major, the ones you prefer using and the careers which are most strongly related.

Skills, knowledge and abilities acquired in the Russian Major

- Skills to communicate effectively in Russian in various social and professional contexts;
- Russian literacy - a sound understanding of cultural and social practices in Russia and the Russian-speaking world in general;
- Ability to engage constructively and respectfully in intercultural dialogue as a bicultural and bilingual person and as a global citizen.

Career fields which build on the skills and knowledge acquired through a Russian Major

The Russian economy creates job opportunities in many fields in Europe and in many countries of the world. The table below lists a range of careers which draw on studies in Russian. The list is not definitive; language skills can complement almost any occupational field and create specific opportunities.

The table also provides some information about 'next steps' i.e. what you might need to do to start a career in the particular field, specifically whether the career field can be entered directly following Bachelor studies, or whether graduate study is required.

There are two employment types for post-Bachelor graduates:

- General employment positions suitable for new graduates
- Graduate Employment Programs

Graduate Employment Programs are offered by some employers – generally large commercial organisations and government. Graduate Employment Program positions are jobs that include a substantial component of training and development. Recruitment for these programs takes place early in the year (around March-May). Final year tertiary students and recent grads can apply. For some of the career areas discussed, Graduate Employment programs are available. Where this is the case, graduate study may not be required.
