

Careers for German Majors/Diploma of Languages in German

There are many career fields which relate to studies in German. In choosing your career path, it is important to reflect on the skills you have learned through your major, the ones you prefer using and the careers which are most strongly related.

Skills, knowledge and abilities acquired in the German major

- Skills to communicate effectively in German in various social and professional contexts,
- German literacy - a sound understanding of cultural and social practices in Germany and the German-speaking world in general,
- Ability to constructively and respectfully engage in intercultural dialogue as a bicultural and bilingual person and as a global citizen

Career fields which build on the skills and knowledge acquired through a German major

If I'm selling to you, I speak your language. If I'm buying, dann müssen Sie Deutsch sprechen (Willy Brandt).

The strong German economy creates job opportunities in many fields. After English, the business language most in demand in the European Union is German. As indicated by the quote of former German chancellor Willy Brandt, in order to sell to the Germans, one needs to speak German. Especially small and medium businesses have developed a multilingual export strategy (<http://www.sens-public.org/spip.php?article869&lang=en>).

The table below lists a range of careers which draw on studies in German. The list is not definitive; language skills can complement almost any occupational field and create specific opportunities.

The table also provides some information about 'next steps' ie what you might need to do to start a career in the particular field, specifically whether the career field can be entered directly following Bachelor studies, or whether graduate study is required.

There are two employment types for post-Bachelor graduates:

- General employment positions suitable for new graduates
- Graduate Employment Programs

Graduate Employment Programs are offered by some employers – generally large commercial organisations and government. Graduate Employment Program positions are jobs that include a substantial component of training and development. Recruitment for these programs takes place early in the year (around March-May). Final year tertiary students and recent grads can apply. For some of the career areas discussed, Graduate Employment programs are available. Where this is the case, graduate study may not be required.
