

Careers for Indonesian Majors/Diploma of Languages in Indonesian

There are a great many career fields which relate to Indonesian Studies. In choosing your career path, it is important to reflect on the skills you have learned through your major, the ones you prefer using and the careers which are most strongly related.

Skills, knowledge and abilities acquired in the Indonesian major

- Skills to communicate effectively in Indonesian in various social and professional contexts
- Asia literacy - a sound understanding of cultural and social practices in Indonesia, one of the major trading partners of Australia
- Skills to communicate appropriately with people with various cultural backgrounds which enable balanced interpretation of various social and professional practices in the global scene

Career fields which build on the skills and knowledge acquired through an Indonesian major

The table below lists a range of careers which make use of Indonesian Studies. The list is not definitive; language skills can complement almost any occupational field and create specific opportunities.

More information on many of these career fields is available at:

The table also provides some information about 'next steps' ie what you might need to do to start a career in the particular field, specifically whether the career field can be entered directly following Bachelor studies, or whether graduate study is required.

A word about post-Bachelor employment

There are two employment types for post-Bachelor graduates:

- General employment positions suitable for new graduates
- Graduate Employment Programs

Graduate Employment Programs are offered by some employers – generally large commercial organisations and government. Graduate Employment Program positions are jobs that include a substantial component of training and development. Recruitment for these programs takes place early in the year (around March-May). Final year tertiary students and recent grads can apply. For some of the career areas discussed, Graduate Employment programs are available. Where this is the case, graduate study may not be required.

Career options generally fall into two categories – those where language is the core activity, and those where language skill is paired with another skill.

‘A knowledge of one or more foreign languages can be useful in a wide range of careers. For some jobs, such as translating, interpreting and language teaching, language skills are the main requirement. For other jobs a combination of languages and other qualifications, knowledge or skills may be needed. For example, people with languages plus IT, law, finance or sales skills are much sought-after.’
